pired on April 1st, and state to be necessary to advertise tenders. Coun. Walters's his committee had been disc advisability of establishin market and doing away wit but before any definite act be undertaken they would l the opinion of the other n the council.

Coun. Alexander was ei his opinion that a free m the proper thing. He also advertising it so that it mig generally known among th He believed it would also be to go further than this and license off butcher shops meat to be cut up and so market. The people indin to pay the tolls and licenses the high cost of living is anything that will be of ad the citizens as a whole shou sidered.

Coun. Carson was in favor off the butcher license, but I think the doing away with t tolls would make any mate ence. The amount charged toll was a very small amou his opinion it was not su deter any farmer from visit nee market.

Coun. Dickinson thought tion should be considered i before taking any definite the matter. The questio away with the market toll looked into with the idea how it would effect the town ly. He thought the coun ask for tenders for the lea market with tolls and with If the market toll was done i some person would be requi after the weigh scales on th and at the station, and wh found what this would c would be in a better shape what the change would me finances of the town.

Coun. Graham was of th that it was only just and fai butchers' licenses be aboli that farmers or any person t come to the market and sell them if they choose.

Reeve Osborne expressed ions along the lines take other aldermen and moved t ing resolution.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,

March 17th, 1913,

met in regular session on evening, Mayor W. A. Steacy in the chair.

Reeve Osborne and Coun. Alexander, Walters, Graham, and Dickinson.

Minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

Communication was read from J. N. Chief of Police, asking the council for an increase of salary to the $100.00 and one new uniform.

The table until later in the evening.

Mr. S. Walker made the motion for the town property for the Isolation Hospital. He offered $175.00 for the same, to be made in two installments. At the end of one year he would pay $75.00 and at the end of the second year $100.00, and would pay interest until paid.

Reeve Osborne, seconded by Mr. Carson, the offer was referred to the Town Property Committee with full power to make such recommendations as they may deem expedient.

Communications were read from J. Paul, M. P., pertaining to the installation of electric lights in the post office, in house and the post office. The communications stated that the question under consideration.

Reeve Osborne, seconded by Mr. Carson, that the several communications be filed and that this council be tendered Mr. Carson's kindness in looking after the same. Carried.

Communications from the School Board for 1913 was before the Council. The School Board had placed in the hands of the Council a report for Public and $4500 for the Collegiate.

Reeve Osborne, Chairman of Fire, Light and Electric Committee, reported that T. J. McCallum and an electric light, and that a 60 watt bracket be placed at or near Mr. McCallum's house.

Reference to the extension of the water works on Centre street south of the river, and the street across the river, was asked for further time.

Reeve Osborne, Chairman of Market Committee, informed the council at the lease of the market held by Mr. F. Bowen on April 1st, and stated it would be necessary to advertise for new Council. Walters stated that the committee had been discussing the matter of establishing a free market doing away with the tolls, and any definite action would be taken when they would like to hear from the public.

Moved by Coun. Walters, seconded by Coun. Graham, that the request of Chief of Police Graham for an increase of $100 in his salary and a new uniform yearly be granted, and that the cost of new uniform not to exceed $30.

Moved in amendment by Reeve Osborne, seconded by Coun. Dickinson, that the request of Chief of Police Graham be referred to the Police Committee to report.

The original motion was carried and the amendment lost.

Mayor Steacy informed the council that Mr. M. G. McGowan, cigar manufacturer, of Kingston, was considering the advisability of establishing a branch of his industry in Nanaimo. The principal difficulty seemed to be that enough employees could not be secured in Nanaimo. It was stated that about fifty girls would be needed.

Coun. Dickinson stated that he expected to be in Kingston on Friday and he would make it a point to interview Mr. McGowan concerning this question.

Reeve Osborne had some complaints to make in reference to the enforcement by the Milk By-Law. This by-law has been in force since September of last year. Only five people have so far complied with the law and taken out licenses, and as it is the duty of the Medical Health Officer to see that this by-law is lived up to, it looks very much like a case where this officer is not doing his duty. He did not wish to bring this trouble before the council, but he thought the Medical Health Officer should do his duty and see that the conditions of the by-law were carried out. If the condition of affairs continue as they now are the council will have to take action and notify the District Officer of the Provincial Board of Health. He was also informed that a miniature slaughter house exists in the town adjacent to one of our main streets, and this was some more work for the Medical Health Officer. From the date of his appointment up to the present time this officer had not acted like a real live Medical Health Officer and it was up to the council to take action.

April 1st, and stated it would say to advertise for new Coun. Walters stated that it had been discussing the type of establishing a free market doing away with the tolls. Any definite action would be taken they would like to hear of the other members of it.

Alexander was emphatic in that a free market was a thing. He also believed in it so that it might become known among the farmers. It would also be profitable here than this and take the butcher shops and allow it to be cut up and sold on the street. The people indirectly have to pay tolls and licenses and when the cost of living is considered that will be of advantage to the whole should be con-arson was in favor of taking a teacher license, but he did not do away with the market. It would make any material difference amount charged for market very small amount and in it was not sufficient to farmer from visiting Napanee. Dickinson thought the question should be considered more fully in any definite action in it. The question of doing away with the market toll should be considered with the idea of seeing if it would effect the town financially. The council should consider for the lease of the tolls and without tolls. The toll was done away with on the market and it would be required to look for the tolls on the market station, and when it was at this would cost them a better shape to judge the change would mean in the town.

Graham was of the opinion it was only just and fair that the licenses be abolished and no person be allowed to operate the market and cut meats if they choose. Osborne expressed his opinion the lines taken by the men and moved the following:

Reeve Osborne, seconded by Walters, that tenders be for the lease of the market, the type of advertisement to be of market with tolls, and tolls." Carried.

Dickinson, chairman of Town Committee, reported in re-installation of automatic switch for electric lights in Warner Park. To have a lamp above description. To have a lamp of the band stand would be, and to have it installed in front of the stand it would be.

Considering the question of the small extra cost of the bottom of band stand, the council would recommend that the switch be installed at the band stand. When this automatic switch is installed the lights in the band stand would be automatically turned off if desired.

Following tenders were received for the Harvey Warner market for summer of 1913: G. A. Pizzariello, $95.00; D. Pizzariello, $95.00; G. A. Pizzariello, $90.00.

RAIDED A STORE.

Irish Did Not Like Line of St. Pat-

RED BANK, N.J., March 18.—A five and ten-cent store was nearly wrecked yesterday by an angry mob that objected to St. Patrick's Day postcards and souvenirs displayed in the windows. Irish residents who led the crowd declared that the display held up to ridicule things which they considered sacred.

When the St. Patrick's Day goods were placed on sale last week, the proprietors were asked to remove them. They refused and yesterday the Catholic parish priest visited the store and renewed the request. Two hundred or more persons gathered outside the store and when the priest reported that his mission had failed,
the mob rushed in, tore the offending cards and images from the windows and counters, and trampled them underfoot. Counters were upset and other goods were destroyed.

The owners of the store declare they will prosecute the raiders.

perished when that vessel went down on an unknown date on the coast of Norway, according to a report given out by the owners yesterday. Wreckage has been found.

Tokyo's Pool of Tears.

One spot in Japan shunned by all is the "Pool of Tears," a little pond on the execution ground of an old prison at Tokyo. It never dries, and even the hottest weather seems to have little effect upon it. Since the removal of the prison no buildings have been erected on the site occupying the brow of a hill. By night it is supposed to be haunted by the ghosts of the many prison victims, and no person, it is related, is bold enough to venture that way after dark. In the daytime the hill is the resort of students who seek fresh air and exercise.—Argonaut.

A Legal View of It.

First Lawyer—No, but I was trying to think what a man could do if he had the other side of the case.—Puck.

men's Compensation
Back on Protest.

Manufacturers Takes Objections to Features of Sir William 's Report — Proposals Are Scope and Differ Slightly from British Law—Industrial are Included.

March 18.—Sir William McMullen held one more sitting on the bill of the new Workmen's Compensation Act before the draft submitted to the Legislature was decided upon by Mr. Wegenast, on behalf of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, took objection to the draft which had been read before the House and made public for the first time.

The bill is not as long as many thought it would be. The hearing began at 11 o'clock and all the terms of the bill had been read and explainable reason for the concise nature of the bill is the stipulation in it for the appointment of a compensation board of three members. This is really the big feature of the bill. The board will have members, and, subject to the approval of the Government, will have power for the administration of the bill. The board will have power to conduct
inquiries, and from its decisions
there will be no appeal to any protective body.

The bill, to use Sir William's own words, is an experiment. It is not the British Act, but in many instances there are wide departures from the model. The idea has been to have been uppermost in the mind was the necessity of bringing the workmen with the employer, no matter with whom he is killed, compensated by the employer. The bill provides that the employer shall be paid his dependents.
If the employer is still a man, Sir William is hovering between "annuity," as it were,
of 50 per cent. of the wage
he was receiving at the time of the accident.

As to the terms of the act,
there are two forms of compensation. One form all manufacturers will be in a class, and the other a general liability fund which they will all contribute.
In the first class, claims will be paid out to the dependents of the killed or disabled. The employer has charge of the administration of the fund, and of the payment of claims and the assessment made upon the employers.
The employer will not pay the same.
A ponderous schedule,
classification of all industries,
classification of the employers in each industry, will be used for the fixing of the

the class of compensation to be paid by the employers, but the amount is the same, 50 or 55 per cent.
of the injured or dead.
The bill will have power to compel employers to put up a guarantee payment of a reasonable death compensation, or to prevent bankruptcy with a liability concern. These employers will be left out of the schedule, nevertheless, the board will

SEN. M'MULLEN DEAD.

Liberal Politician Passes Away at His Home in Mount Forest.

MOUNT FOREST, March 18.—Senator James McMullen died at 12.40 this morning at his home "Maitland Hall" here, in his eightieth year. It was only five days ago that he was taken ill with erysipelas, but from the first no hope was held out for his recovery.
Mrs. McMullen died only last Wednesday and was buried on Friday.
Senator McMullen only returned from Ottawa ten days ago and intended to return when the sessions were to be resumed after Easter.

The late Senator was the second son of Archibald McMullen, a native of Monaghan, Ireland, who came to Canada in 1846. He was born in Monaghan on Nov. 29, 1836, and educated in the public schools. He was married in September, 1856, to Mary Ann, the youngest daughter of Robert Dunbar of Guelph, Ont.

For some years he was engaged in mercantile life, and occupied the position of reeve of Mount Forest. He sat for North Wellington in the House of Commons in the Liberal interests from 1882 to 1900. He opposed the erection of a national monument to Sir John Macdonald in 1892, and supported Nicholas Flood David for the extension of the Dominion franchise to women in 1895. He was called to the Senate Feb. 11, 1902, by Lord Minto. He was chairman of the standing committee on Public Accounts from 1896 to 1900. In 1902 he joined Hon. J. I. Tarte for increased protection. In 1907 he introduced a measure looking to Senate reform, and in 1910 won for the protection of life level crossings. He was opposed to the Taft-Fielding reciprocity compact in 1911, and was a vice-president of the Dominion Life Assurance Co.

DIVORCE TOO COSTLY.

A Thousand Dollars Too Much For Poor People Says Dean.

MONTREAL, March 18.—That $1,000
is the minimum cost at which a divorce may be obtained in Canada and that this prohibitive price renders the institution a luxury, as far as the poorer classes are concerned, was the statement of Dean Walton in an address before the Montreal Women's Club yesterday afternoon.

This state of affairs was to be regretted, as it simply meant discrimination against the poor who, as a class, needed the remedy of divorce
more than the rich—a fact not necessarily due to the superior morality of the latter class, but because in their case when a stormcloud appeared upon the matrimonial horizon, one of the aggrieved parties need simply seek solace in travel or some similar diversion. With the poor it was different; they had no remedy but to tolerate one another or to separate.
These separations seemed to the speaker to be doing greater harm than divorce.

In his opinion it were better that the marriage should be terminated and remarriage allowed, for the children were just as well protected and a higher tone of morality preserved.

Sir James Thought Railway Board's Fewers Were Invaded.

TORONTO, March 18.—Had one of the clauses in the revised Ontario Railway Act been adopted in the Legislature yesterday it would have been possible for the Lieutenant-Governor-in-council, or the Government to upset any decision of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board without so much as a petition from parties interested.
But when the paragraph in question was reached while the act was being discussed in committee of the whole, Sir James Whitney suggested an amendment, because, in his belief, if the clause passed the board would not have as much power as such a tribunal should. The clause was therefore changed, making it read to the effect that the Lieutenant-Governor-in-council could not vary or rescind a decision unless petitioned by a party, person or company.

In changing the clause Sir James said that an appeal from the decision of the board to the Lieutenant-Governor should be possible, because no party should be entirely at the mercy of one tribunal. But he did not believe that the Lieutenant-Governor should be able to step in without any notification and use such powers.
W. H. Proudfoot, Liberal for Centre Huron, thought that it would be a mistake to allow any appeal to the Lieutenant-Governor, but to the appellate division of the Supreme Court.

Another amendment was made to the act whereby a party appealing from a decision of the board will not have to pay $250 as security into the court before the appeal is set down for a hearing.

The new Bulk Sales Act was given its second reading. It provides that the purchaser of the stock of a store shall get a statement in writing by the vendor of all his liability accounts over $50, and shall assume the indebtedness upon the stock. Failing to obtain this statement the sale is not a sale in the eyes of the law, and the goods may be seized if the vendor has already fled. On receiving the statement the purchaser must get the creditors to waive their claims before the sale is legalized. This he does by agreeing to assume the debts of the vendor.

COLUMBUS, O., March 18.—De- claring that the immodesty of the at- tire worn by women on the streets and in public places is the cause of "a great wave of immorality now sweep- ing over the country," Representative Louis H. Cappelletti of Cincinnati, last evening introduced a bill in the lower House of the Legislature providing for the appointment by the governor of a committee of three members to pre- scribe the fashions to be worn by wo- men in the State of Ohio.

Under the provision of the bill the commission would be compelled to fix limits on décollete dresses, so that "not more than two inches of the neck below the chin shall be uncovered." Another clause of the measure pro- vides "that transparent stockings shall not be displayed or worn in public places."

Another provision of the bill states "that it shall be unlawful to display or wear any outer garment trimmed or combined with lace insertion or any kind of embroidery mesh or net through which the color of texture of the skin may be distinguished with- out having the lace or other trans- parent material backed with opaque material."

LET the greatest athlete have dyspepsia and his strength will soon fail. One's stamina—forcefulness and strength of mind or muscle depend upon the blood, and the blood in turn, requires a healthy stomach, for the stomach is the laboratory where the food is digested and such elements are taken up—or assimilated—which makes blood. In consequence all the organs of the body, such as heart, lungs, liver and kidneys, as well as the nervous system, feel the bad effect if the stomach is deranged.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

helps the stomach to digest food properly, starts the liver into new activity, removing the poisons from the blood, and the various organs get rich, red blood, instead of being ill nourished. ## EXPLODED THE WRONG WAY

TORIES DISMAYED AT INDIGNATION AROUSED BY CHURCHILL'S LAST MEMORANDUM.

Ottawa, March 15th. — The cheers with which the Tories greeted Mr. Winston Churchill's Memorandum in which he obliged Mr. Borden by telling the Canadian Premier that Canada was not fit to either build, man or maintain battleships, have been succeeded by a feeling of dismay as they observe the wave of resentment which has spread throughout the country at this piece of ill-timed and rather contemptuous advice from the First Lord of the Admiralty. That which they hoped would prove a bomb has turned out to be a veritable boomerang. No stronger proof of the inevitable difficulties attendant upon the subservient policy of tribute as proposed by Mr. Borden could have been desired than the strong irritation aroused throughout Canada by Mr. Churchill's interference in Canadian domestic affairs—even though he did this to help on the Canadian Premier. It is simply a foretaste of the continual friction and annoyance that would certainly result if Canada were to follow the policy of building warships in England and could not get either the plant or mechanical skill to build battleships and that Canadians would not join the navy. Mr. Carvell pointedly remarked, "I had no idea that Ministers of the Crown would applaud this statement that you could not get Canadians to join the navy. Apparently these gentlemen think you can not get Canadians to do anything but pay. I am ashamed that Canadians would applaud sentiments of that kind."

"I do not wonder that the Prime Minister did not want to read this document," he continued, "in his place I would not have wanted to insult the people of Canada by reading such a letter." And then as a man acquainted with steel plants and shipping, Mr. Carvell showed that Mr. Winston Churchill had shown hopeless ignorance of the capabilities of Canada. He further showed that Mr. Churchill was in all probability simply retreating back what had been told him—"Undoubtedly when the Prime Minister and his colleagues went to England last summer they told the British Government that we could not man Canadian vessels and should not under any condition whatever allow Canadians to be put on board a vessel or man-of-war. And then he sends back to the people of Canada the slander they left him."

THE WRONG TIME FOR ALARM.

Discussing the alarmist propaganda

expressed the opinion that the time was not far distant when Canada would have to undertake the defence of the North Pacific and North Atlantic, while New Zealand and Australia guarded the Southern Pacific, thus leaving England free to concentrate on the North Sea and guard her trade routes. He declared that the Australasian policy of having its own navy operating in conjunction with the British Admiralty must eventually be followed by all self-governing Dominions.

That is the policy of the Liberal party of Canada. As soon as they return to power that is the self-respecting policy to be pursued by the self-governing Dominion. But as long as Canada remains under the retrogressive rule of the combination Tory Nationalist Government nothing can be looked for but a policy of tribute, to send the ships paid for by Canada, manned and maintained by Great Britain to be stationed in the North Sea, leaving Canada bare of defence, and young Canadian manhood denied the opportunity of training for naval service which it is compelled to pay for.

WHAT THE KING MIGHT HAVE SAID.

In opening the Imperial Parliament on March 10th, King George said:

"The recent gift of a battleship by the Malay States, the ready consent of the New Zealand Government to the retention in the North Sea of the fleet of battleships contributed by them, the steady progress toward the establishment of an Australian fleet, and the discussion now proceeding in the Canadian Parliament on matters of defence testify to the universal desire within the Empire for the maintenance of the common safety."

Had the Laurier Government been sustained in 1911, King George would have been able to put Canada where she belongs, in the first place, and say "the steady progress towards the establishment of a Canadian fleet." That fleet would by now have been nearing completion in shipyards at Montreal. But the Borden Government having been elected, all King George could say that Canada was doing was "discussion."

TORIES DEGRADING CANADA.

As was pointed out recently in Parliament, by Dr. Michael Clark, himself an Englishman of sturdy loyalty, Mr. Borden is doing all in his power to bring about the Tory dreams of Imperial unity, with Canada sinking its autonomous existence and becoming a province of the Empire under an Imperial Parliament.

It is every day more plain that the Conservative Government were the fathers of the idea that Canada, although able to build the greatest railroads and inland canals in the world, is unable to build its own ships. The time for a change should be near at hand.

EVEN BEHIND NEWFOUNDLAND

Newfoundland is taking a real part in Imperial Naval Defence. She has hundreds of naval militia men trained on British warships. Is it to be said that—Canada with thirty times Newfoundland's population cannot do what she is doing? Mr. Borden's Government has systematically discouraged the formation of a Canadian Naval militia as it was inaugurated by the Laurier Government in 1910, as has been shown by its own Blue Books. Mr. Borden is one of those Little Canadians who believe that Canada can neither build nor man warships.

MENTIONAL TORY DECEPTION.

A sample of the manner in which the Tory press is trying to mislead the people on the naval question is shown

ed the British Empire upon Australia has no use for it, the disruptionists. They s this thing, and send it to and let it meet with the serves."

WHAT LOYAL FRENCH DIANS THINK.

The real opinion of the lo Canadians of Quebec, apart f w who were led astra Nationalist-Tory alliance, w ably laid down in the Commons on February 25th P. Pacand, the Liberal m Megantic, when he said:—

"Canadians believe, Sir, th the Empire of which they Canada is called upon to p portant part.

"Situated as we are our our national a-pirations sh spread in this new world tl freedom and of justice wh learned to cherish from En for the defence of which she her strength, her power a tlect to introduce and to r the old world.

"To achieve this work, we we already possess, that wit England herself, would powerless for good, local, s ment.

"With a Canadian navy have no such difficulties ah we have no such controversi we have a clear view of the are going to follow, we help pire when in need; we buil at home the ships which wil our own control. #### THE CANADIAN NAVAL SERVICE.

Under Laurier Un

though he did this to help on the Canadian Premier. It is simply a foretaste of the continual friction and annoyance that would certainly result if Canada were to follow the policy of building warships in England and leaving them to be manned and managed by England, and justifies the objection that instead of knitting the Empire, Mr. Borden's policy would lead to disruption.

No stronger proof of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's statesmanship could be demanded. It more than justifies the strenuous opposition that is being made by the Liberal party to Mr. Borden's hopeless emergency, and their demands that as soon as the people have won the information they are entitled to, they should be consulted on the question. It is hardly likely that the people who built the two greatest transcontinental railways in the world and the greatest inland system of navigation, who have step by step won their position as an autonomous nation within the Empire, will now accept Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill's dictum that they are incompetent to build or man their own navy and that they should pay tribute to England for protection.

As usual Mr. Borden's request for information was so worded as to dictate the reply. He wrote, "It has been suggested to me that the construction of large warships of the most modern type has been attended with great difficulties in its earliest stages and that the cost has been excessive," and then asked for information along that line "to be available if necessary." Mr. Churchill naturally concluded that Mr. Borden wanted arguments against the construction in Canada of the most powerful battleships in the world as proposed in his Naval Bill and he helped Mr. Borden out with more energy than discretion.

All this was totally beside any question raised by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. His amendment proposed, "That any measure of Canadian aid to Imperial Naval Defence which does not imply the permanent policy of participation by ships owned, manned and maintained by Canada, and contemplating construction as soon as possible in Canada is not an adequate or satisfactory expression of the aspirations of the Canadian people." The Laurier policy of 1910 never proposed to start with dreadnoughts, but with effective cruisers and destroyers, and half a dozen of the leading British ship-building firms actually tendered and were merely waiting the order to undertake to build them in Canada under the same provisions with regard to construction and time as in England.

A concerted attempt has been made by the Tories to mislead by using the word "warships" instead of "battleship." Mr. Churchill was particularly careful throughout his Memorandum to confide himself exclusively to "battleships," the largest type of vessel known. "Warship" might mean anything from a submarine to a dreadnought.

British opinion on this point is set forth by the London Times of December 14th last, discussing the two naval plans—

"Mr. Borden left the question open; Sir Wilfrid Laurier answers it by at once declaring for a separate Canadian fleet. It is not for us to weigh these two divergent views; nor is the subject an urgent one. It is of real moment that the capacity for naval construction should be distributed in many British centres rather than concentrated here."

MR. CARVELL'S SHARP REJOINER.

Mr. Carvell lost no time in replying to the supposed bomb and exploded it pretty thoroughly. After the Tories had finished cheering from Mr. Churchill's statement that Canada adrians to be put on board a vessel or man-of-war. And then he sends back to the people of Canada the slander they left him."

THE WRONG TIME FOR ALARM.

Discussing the alarmist propaganda of such enthusiasts as Lord Beresford and Lord Roberts, who base their calls for more navy and universal conscription upon the fact that Great Britain alone is not in a position to meet the armies and navies of all the rest of Europe combined, the Westminster Gazette of February 17th last says: "If we consider the position of Great Britain in the world there could scarcely be a less opportune moment than the present for these agitations. If Great Britain were Austria, faced with the possibilities of the formidable new military Power on her frontier, or even if, like Germany, she were compelled to consider the possible effects of the new facts in Europe upon the alliance of which she was a member, she might be excused for some searchings of heart. But she has just got through a difficult period of European diplomacy with credit to herself, and without displaying any of the weaknesses which, according to some of her present advisers, ought to be inherent in her present situation. Her fleet is stronger than ever it was, and there are signs of relief from the stress of competition to which it has been subject in recent years. She is, fortunately, on far better terms with France and Russia than she was ten years ago, and her relations with Germany have visibly improved. If Europe is now threatened with an increase of its military forces there is no reason to think that these are aimed at her, and the course of events in Europe is likely to transfer such friction as there is from the regions in which she is specially concerned to the regions in which she is less concerned. The answer is, we suppose, that a certain military school has in recent years dreamed dreams, and encouraged a great many innocent non-military people to dream dreams of military action in Europe which previously was unthought of."

It is increasingly evident that every European move shows that Mr. Borden is one of those who dreamed those dreams, undoubtedly under the nightmare influence of his Nationalist alliance. Even while he was hatching his emergency storm centre of Europe moved from the North Sea to the near East, where should the long dreaded conflagration break out it will be fought hundreds of miles from any spot that could be reached by a British fleet.

ARE AUSTRALIANS SUPERIOR TO US?

It is continually evident that the Australian idea of Imperial defence runs on lines parallel to those pursued by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Australian are determined that their own waters shall be protected and have the idea that other portions of the Empire should follow their example, as provided in the agreement of 1909. Speaking at the Royal Colonial Institute at London on March 11th, Sir George Reid, Australian High Commissioner,

MENTIONAL TORY DECEPTION.

A sample of the manner in which the Tory press is trying to mislead the people on the naval question is shown by the way in which the last Memorandum from Winston Churchill was published. Mr. Churchill's whole argument was that it would be practically impossible for Canada to build "battleships" at the present time or for years to come. "Battleships" are what are known as capital ships, of the first class, running from 20,000 tons up. The Tory papers translate this into "war ships" which might mean anything from 1500 ton destroyers to the largest battle ships. This was done with an unanimity which would indicate that it was not in mere ignorance or inadvertency but a calculated plan to deceive.

BORDEN'S POLICY LEADING TO THE DISRUPTION OF THE EMPIRE.

Dr. Michael Clarke, M. P., for Red Deer on the Naval Debate, Wednesday, March 12th—

"The third course open to the Ministry, if they really believe in this proposal, is an immediate election. We are ready for it. The people must be consulted sooner or later and you can withdraw it now and submit it later. I will give you the opinion that I gave four years ago that there is no fear of Germany and England fighting in the meantime. If you do not withdraw it, and do not want to wait for an election, let us have the election now. I will take the opportunity of reading what was printed in the Daily News, which represents more Liberals in England at the present time than Mr. Churchill does. The Daily News has over half a million subscribers and I venture to say it voices the Liberal sentiment of Great Britain as well as any paper published in the Island. The Daily News says:

"The least concession he can make to the Canadian people is to consult them before committing them to a constitutional revolution condemned by all the other dominions."

"It must not be imagined that Canadian Liberals are alone in condemnation of the Borden scheme. The Australian Government has repudiated any extension of it to Australia. The Hon. Mr. Sauer, on behalf of the South African Government, expressed his fear that the movement going on in different parts of the Empire, was not wholly spontaneous. He criticised Canada's policy of having a minister on the Council of Defence, and doubted whether South Africa would follow suit."

The first fruits, therefore, of the Borden policy are a domestic crisis in Canada of the first magnitude. We have from the first criticised the substance of the Borden scheme on constitutional grounds. We have repeatedly insisted that it was doing an ill service to the Empire to make the navy an issue between the parties in the dominions. Now, the Borden scheme has been pushed to a point of an acute political crisis in Canada. It will be agreed by all rational minds that it is doing a worse service to Imperial unity."

I desire to close what I have to say by charging upon the Government that this is dividing Canada upon a question of Imperial importance, against their own well-thought out and well-expressed convictions of three years ago, which are still the convictions of the majority of the people. They have divided Great Britain by their policy; there is an acute division with an impending debate in the Imperial Parliament, upon a subject which should be not a subject of contention, but a subject of congratulation and gratitude. They have divid-

REMODELING AN OLD DAIRY BARN

Frequently a farmer or a dairyman asks help or advice in remodeling an old barn, writes H. E. McCartney in National Stockman. Recently the writer was called out on such an errand. The barn was found to be a very substantial frame affair, once a beef cattle feeding barn, but a few years ago put to its present use. The chief faults of the barn from the standpoint of a dairy barn were:

There was an insufficient supply of light. There was really no light on the south at all. The mangers were of lumber and built rather high, so that the cows breathed against them instead of above them. The stall partitions were of lumber and rather high, making them not only insanitary, but very serious obstructions to light and air in the barn. Then there was no system or effective means of ventilating the building. Such conditions exist in a great many herds, but they may be overcome quite readily when it is undertaken systematically.

The plan worked out for the renovation of the barn in question and which the owner expects to follow is to dis-

Guernsey cattle are gaining a great reputation in this country for milk and butter production. The cows are economical producers, and their vitality and constitution make them satisfactory on the average farm. Guernsey cattle are very prepotent and will rapidly improve the milking capacity of native herds on which they are crossed. Glen-coe's Bopeep, the Guernsey cow shown, is one of the most famous cows of her breed. She was first in the aged cow class at Chicago in 1912 and has won many prizes in competition with the best in the land. She is owned by W. W. Marsh, Waterloo, Ia.

card interior furnishings of wood. All the high wooden mangers and stall partitions will be torn out and floors and mangers of cement constructed. A single curved iron pipe will be used for stall partitions. Thus the interior will be made light, sanitary and easy to clean. The south end and the east and west sides of the barn will be opened up and almost continuous glass thirty inches high put in. Then for ventilation two open shafts will be constructed in the middle of the barn and from some distance below the ceiling to the roof. Fresh air will enter through the outside windows and the foul air pass out through the central shafts.

Along with cleaning up the barn we may well consider cleaning up the yards. Clean milk cannot be secured from cows running in a dirty yard, for

OAT SPROUTS FINE WINTER GREENS.

In winter, when all's so cold and white and there's nothing green in sight, a block of sprouted oats looks good enough for humans to eat. Bid-dy certainly gobbles it greedily. It has become a standard green food for winter, not so much for its food value, but for its stimulative effect on the digestive organs, for variety, for a substitute for summer greens, to make the crop spongy, to mix with the rich con-

The fancier who does not feed suc-culent greens as well as good grains need not expect many eggs in winter, for it's the good green stuff that helps to bring the big bunch of eggs in spring and summer, and it is just as essential for winter laying.

Sprouting oats is easy. Sprouting cabinets with heating apparatus are now on the market. A rack like the picture or any old box with narrow rim will do.

Simply soak clean, sound oats in warm water for a day and then spread in trays about two inches deep and keep in temperature of 60 to 70 de-grees or warmer.

LIVE STOCK TALK.

Horses must be upheaded, have spirit and finish and be fast walkers.

Be sure the box for salt in the sheep quarters is kept filled.

Drop everything to help a horse or a cow that is in trouble, no matter whether it is your own or your neighbor's.

Farming on a business basis eliminates small mules just as it displaces small horses.

Beef cattle may be raised on many farms, and there are good reasons for raising them. Not the least of these is that they provide a means of building up the farm in fertility.

There are profits in raising good horses and mules as one of the features of farming. Get a few good mares and let them bring you a good income raising horses and mules.

Those who have silos full of silage find winter feeding easy and satisfactory to the live stock.

IS THIS CONTRAST?

Desbarats, Deputy Minister of Naval Service says in his Report for 1912 that, "due to the uncertainty of future Naval policy, and the lack of accommodation available for special efforts have been made to obtain recruits for the navy." It is also probably due to the feeling that a permanent tribute does not need to be paid.

NEW YORK OR SELF-GOVERNING DOMINION.

Letter from the Ottawa Citizen (an organ) of March 13th clearly shows the difference between the Liberal and Tory attitude to Canada's status. Mr. Bennett said: "The Churchill policy, if persisted in, will lead to only one result—the disruption of the Empire Great Britain."

Devlin Wright, who was arguing about the future of Canada when Mr. Bennett interrupted, said Mr. Bennett, of Calgary, was repeating that "Canada is a colony." Mr. Wright certainly is not a Tory, said Mr. Devlin.

WHAT IS CANADA?

What is it then? "It came from the government side. Since 1867 it has been a governing dominion within the empire. To say it is only a colony is to belittle Canada. Winston Churchill do that."

Bennett, referred to by the Tories as the great Tory of Imperialism. In the House of Commons on February 1st he said, "The simple fact remains that Canada is only a self-governing dominion."

Again, "We must concede without argument that we are not to its legislation and that Parliament that sits at Westminster might well legislate for us." "Many Canadians would concede such a concession?"

The Ready Editor.

In your report of my daughtering her name "Gratia" was "Gratis." "Well, that wasn't such a mistake. You gave her away, didn't you?"

An Everyday Tragedy.

She dropped her eyes on the floor and burst into the room. Her face thened rapidly, and she fixed him with a glance. As she rose and fell she dropped and her voice broke, through the outside shafts and the foul air pass out through the central shafts.

Along with cleaning up the barn we may well consider cleaning up the yards. Clean milk cannot be secured from cows running in a dirty yard, for if the yard is dirty the cows will be also. Frequently we find cows during a wet season almost to their knees in manure and filth. Such conditions are unhealthful for the cows and mean contamination of the milk. The manure had best be hauled to the field as fast as a load accumulates. The cows should have a dry, clean place to run during the day. It means better milk and more milk and more healthy cows.

Buy the Herd Boar Early.

One of the greatest advantages that the farmer can have in the early purchase of his herd boar lies in the fact that he has first choice from among the animals offered. No breeder has yet succeeded in producing a perfect lot of pigs. The most successful breeders are those who produce the largest number of good pigs, but all breeders produce inferior pigs and those which have only a mediocre quality. The farmer who waits until he is ready to use the boar before buying him is forced to take what is left of the breeding herd after all other sales have been made from it. He may possibly get a good animal, but the chances are against him, and the small cost of feed which the boar consumes during the months before he is actually used is more than offset by this opportunity for first choice and by the fact that the farmer can train the boar himself and fit him to his environment in his new home. There is profit to be had in buying the boars young for these reasons, as well as for the added and important reason that he does not cost so much when bought young as he does when grown to maturity.

Serum For Calf Scours.

In the past considerable loss has been sustained by Wisconsin cattle breeders from a fatal disease of calves known as white scours or calf dysentery. The veterinary science department of the college of agriculture of the University of Wisconsin calls attention to a serum which has been found especially reliable as a preventive treatment for this disease. White scours occur in the newborn calf and is manifested by a very profuse, malodorous white diarrhea, which usually results in death within a few hours. On account of its infectious nature affected calves and their dams must be isolated to prevent the disease from spreading to other animals. Careful disinfection of the pen and contaminated surroundings must not be neglected.

of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. Salts and other harsh mineral purgatives irritate the delicate lining of the bowels. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills—entirely vegetable—regulate the bowels effectively without weakening, sickening or griping. Use along, to take the place of that fed, a square foot of the sod being broken up for twelve hens per day.

In this process oats sometimes mold and are then unfit for food.

To prevent, the oats should be sterilized before soaking.

To sterilize, say, fifteen bushels of oats mix a half pint of formalin with fifteen gallons of water.

Spread the oats, thoroughly wet with solution, and cover for half day, so that grain is thoroughly disinfected; then dry the oats, bag and sprout as needed.

When sprouts are too long they are tough and indigestible.

As hens are greedy for this food it must not be fed strong at first, especially where greens have not been fed regularly, as they are apt to overfeed and get hard crop.

WINTER PIG FEEDING.

An Illinois Farmer's Views on Best Method of Handling Swine.

The pigs found about many farms at this season of the year may be found under almost all conditions, writes an Illinois farmer in the Iowa Homestead. Everything, with the exception of those intended to be retained as breeding stock, should be ready for the market by the time the spring pigs arrive.

The more comfortable these young shotes can be made the more easily will they gain. An animal of this kind should be fed all the food he can consume, and anything short of this is unprofitable. This simply means that the pigs should be given all they can eat and clean up readily twice a day. It is best never to allow any feed to be left in the trough from one feeding time till the next, as it will simply be a waste and of no benefit to the animals.

The question of feed is one of great moment. The available feed supply with a great many consists mostly of ear corn. More or less of the waste from vegetable and fruit cellars can find its way to the pigpens to good advantage. Ear corn ground fine makes excellent feed for pigs and when mixed with an equal part of best quality of wheat bran, scalded or cooked if possible, and fed somewhat thick will be found one of the best growing and flesh forming rations. Oatmeal and barley may be added to very good advantage and the quality of the pork benefited.

The pigs as found in the different neighborhoods will vary very much in quality, and it is a good plan to cull out and market the ripest ones as they come on. This plan has the advantage of giving the owner some money to use, and also this gradual placing of the product on the market would avoid any dull conditions that a glut is most sure to entail.

Much of the ear corn can be fed as it is on the cob. I have always considered it best to mix a quantity of feed at a time and where possible dump in a lot of skim milk. This not only helps to make a very palatable feed, but also a very nutritious combination.

It is well to keep a plentiful supply of charcoal, ashes and salt in the pens at all times. A feature that is very necessary is to keep the pigs in a healthy condition, and these are of great benefit in maintaining the animals in such a state.

The pigs should be given dry and well ventilated quarters, which must be kept clean. Contrary to common belief, hogs have some habits which raise them above other domestic animals from the standpoint of cleanliness. For example, a hog will not sleep in its own filth unless compelled to do so. If part of the floor of the pen is raised and kept well bedded with straw, while the rest is not, all excrement will be left on the unbedded portion of the floor, and the bed itself will always be clean. All feeding and drinking places should be kept clean and the water supply pure.

W. C. T. U.

The annual meeting of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance, held in Massey Hall, Toronto, Wednesday, February 28th, was an even greater success than had been anticipated.
From all parts of Ontario, old and new, flocked delegates, men and women, and the greatest enthusiasm was shown at all sessions of the convention and a decided optimism as to the bright prospect of temperance work in Ontario during the future.
One of the measures was in the form of a declaration calling "upon temperance electors to support only candidates who would favor legislation not less advanced than that which the Liberal party had already advanced."
It was clearly stated that no partizan-ship was intended by this declaration,
it merely demanded that any candidate, no matter of which party he might be, should declare himself in favor of at least as advanced temperance principles as the abolition of the bar. The convention was absolutely unanimous in its approval of this declaration. Unanimous also was the endorsement of the resolution condemning the three-fifths clause, showing clearly the absurdity of the theory that public opinion has swung round
to approval of this unfair measure.
One of the important items of business was the election of a new president of the alliance, Mr. Gibson having resigned after six years of strenuous work. Canon R. W. E. Greene, a leader of temperance work in the Church of England for more than a quarter of a century, succeeds Mr.
Gibson, who is still an active worker as first vice-president. The great mass meeting which brought the convention to a close, was a striking proof of the growing strength and importance of the Temperance Alliance.

furnish the greatest amount of pleasure to theatregoers on this continent. The Pollard Juvenile Company which will visit this town, is composed of some fifty of the cleverest of the different companies of the past six years and as the tour is to comprise visits to every principal city on the globe, the management has used particular care in the selection of the personnel. In Sydney, in Honolulu and on the Pacific Coast, as well as the Atlantic shores of United States and Canada, the records formerly held by the Pollard companies have been eclipsed and the public everywhere proclaim the present organization the finest, artistically and otherwise, that has been brought to this continent.

The repertoire of the company will include a number of musical comedies and opera which are new to this vicinity, and each has a scenic production worthy of the term grand. Among the members of the present company who have made names for themselves on previous "Pollard" visits, are Teddy McNamara, Queenie Williams, Willie Pollard, Eva Pollard, May Pollard, Nellie McNamara, Dottie Brown, Daisy Wilson, Leslie Donaghy, Pattie Hill and others. Like Maude Adams, Mrs. Fiske, Mme. Melba, Henry Dixie, Mabel Taliaferro, Corinne and a score of other stars who began their stage careers as children, the Pollards are growing up now and each member has reached the age of fifteen and yet none have reached nineteen years. Their careers are secure and their talents developed and rounded out. They may be judged by the same standard as the "grown-ups" and it is the boast of the management that they will not suffer in the comparison. The engagement here promises to be a great social as well as an artistic success. The Pollards will present "The Mikado."

15TH.

Government votes down motion by Opposition that the detailed expenditures of the Hydro Electric Power Commission be presented to the Legislature as in the case of other departments of the Government.

Continuation of the temperance debate. Sir James has not yet spoken.

Debate on the Budget. Mr. Rowell asks what the Government is going to do about the deficit. Sir James says "Wait and see."

Criticism by Opposition with regard to the site of the new Government House and the amount of money being spent on it. Sir James defends the location and the expenditure.

Close personal debate between the Prime Minister and Leader of the Opposition in regard to the report of the Hydro Commission. The Premier charges Mr. Rowell with improperly keeping the report, but later apologizes.

Mr. Rowell's third attempt to have the $5,000,000.00 Northern Ontario appropriation spent under the direction of the Legislature and not by the Governor in Council thrown out by the ruling of the chair.

Opposition criticizes alleged gross inefficiency at Jordan Horticultural Experimental Station.

HYDRO EXPENDITURES.

A detailed account of the expenditures of the Hydro Electric Commission amounting to over $4,000,000.00 is not to be brought before the Legislature. Sir James Whitney declared that it would take too long to get the information collected and his majority in the House voted down the Opposition in their motion to secure the statement. Mr. Rowell in his speech, pointed out that the motion involved no criticism of the Hydro, but was simply a reasonable request for a detailed financial statement of the expenditures. He felt sure that the people of the Province would not be satisfied until such detailed information was made available to the House, in order that they might see how their money was being expended. All other departments of the Government presented such statements and there was no reason why the same principle should not apply to the Hydro.

PROVINCIAL DEFICIT.

Mr. Rowell's estimate of this year's deficit in Provincial finances, based on the figures offered by Hon. I. B. Lucas, Acting Provincial Treasurer, is over $4,000,000.00, made up as follows:

Total estimated expenditure on current account and on public buildings (not including T. & N.O. and Hydro Electric).....	$10 484 018 75
Add Statutory expenditure (last year's figures) This year's according to Mr. Lucas will be slightly more.....	2 337 157 78
Total.....	$ 12 821 176 53
Estimated receipts.....	9 546 378 88
Deficit.....	$ 3 274 797 65

This does not include the further supplementary estimated not yet brought down. Last year's figures are given. Mr. Lucas did not suggest that the amount this year would be less 768 740 25

Total deficit..... $ 4 043 537 90
Mr. Rowell's chief ground of criticism was, not only the deficit alarming, but that the Government was not proposing any method by which the liabilities were to be met.

Good fountain pens, $1.50 at Wallace's Drug Store. Every pen a 14 kt. sold point.

Oats—No. 3 white, 28½c to 28¾c. Rye—No. 2, 53c to 55c. Bran—$17 to $17.50. Flour—First patents, $4.10 to $4.15; second patents, $3.95 to $4.30; first clears, $2.90 to $3.20; second clears, $2.40 to $2.70.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, March 17.—Close—Wheat—No. 1 hard, 83½c to 84c; No. 1 northern, 82½c to 83c; No. 2 northern, 79½c to 81c; May, 84½c bid; July, 86½c bid; September, 86½c bid.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, March 17.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ended March 15, were 1500 cattle, 130 sheep and lambs, 2600 hogs and 1400 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1200 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1900 hogs and 600 calves.

This was the Easter live stock market and in consequence the offerings of cattle were somewhat larger than usual and the quality much better, as the drovers in most cases make it a point to secure some of the best stock that can be had throughout the country for this trade. The display compared favorably with former years, but there did not seem to be the same interest taken in the market on the part of buyers as heretofore. Trade on the whole was fairly good.

A few loads of extra choice stall-fed steers sold at $7.50, including one of 22 head, which weighed 30,175 pounds and a number of loads of choice steers changed hands at $7 to $7.25 per cwt. For picked lots of extra choice Easter steers as high as $7.75 to $8 was paid, and choice sold at $7.25 to $7.50 per cwt. There were several buyers from Quebec on the market who bought all the extra choice and choice bulls at $6.25 to $6.75 per cwt.

The supply of sheep and lambs was very small for which the demand was good and the undertone to the market was firm, but prices showed no change. A few choice spring lambs brought $10 each, and the ordinary class of calves sold at from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

The tone of the market for hogs was stronger and prices scored a further advance of 10c per cwt. The demand was good from packers and sales of selected lots were made at $10.40 to $10.50 per cwt., weighed off the cars:

Butcher cattle, choice, $7.25 to $7.50; medium, $6.50 to $6.25; common, $4.75 to $5; canners, $3.50 to $3.75; choice cows, $5 to $6.50; milkers, choice, each, $50 to $85; common and medium, each, $70 to $75; springers, $60 to $65.
Sheep—Ewes, $5.75 to $6; bucks and culls, $5.25 to $5.50; lambs, $8.25 to $8.50.
Hogs—F.o.b., $10.40 to $10.50.
Calves—$3 to $10.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, March 17.—Cattle—Receipts, 17,000; market strong. Beefsteers, $7.25 to $9.15; Texas steers, $6.50 to $7.65; stock-ers and feeders, $6.10 to $8.20; cows and heifers, $3.50 to $5.10; calves, $7 to $11.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 30,000; market higher. Light, $8.90 to $9.25; mixed, $8.75 to $9.20; heavy, $8.50 to $9.10; rough, $8.50 to $8.65; pigs, $7.15 to $9.10; bulk of sales, $8.90 to $9.10.

GIVE YOUR BOY A FARM!

Every farmer wants to provide for his sons, but seldom will the old homestead, developed with toil, suffice to meet their needs. The boys have been brought up to the land. They are familiar with all the phases of farming. They should have land of their own. How is the farmer going to meet this emergency?

The Logical Answer is Western Canada.

Thousands of acres, divided into 160 acre farms, are being thrown open for entry by the Dominion Government along or near the lines of the

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY.

The land gives a wide chance. There are some plots on the open prairie and others again in the well-wooded, well-watered districts in

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

A large number of these homesteads are particularly adapted to mixed farming.

Write or Enquire To-day.

Any agent of the Canadian Northern Railway, or the undersigned will be glad to send, on application full information as to the location of these homesteads and the way to secure and reach them. Write for "The Bread Basket," "35,000 Free Homestead" and our Peace River Booklet. You will be interested.

Most Beautiful Easter Present

The Mysterious, Luminous Crucifix or The Cross of Eternal Light.

The most marvelous mystic wonder of the twentieth century. Our Saviour nailed to the cross, a beautiful and marvellous work of art, that has mystified the whole world with its startling luminous effect, which is everlasting. The figure of Christ as well as the Cross itself are of imitation marble material, showing WHITE in daylight and in a GLORIOUS, LUMINOUS, MYSTIC LIGHT AT NIGHT IN THE DARKEST ROOM. The luminous effect is everlasting. The greatest work of art ever known to science. It is indeed a glorious and most precious article of true devotion. Science has long been puzzled at this mysterious work of art.

There are two different sizes: The larger one (11 1/2 by 6 inches) has been reduced to only $2.00 from the original price of $10.00, and the smaller one (4 by 8) from $5.00 to but $1.00, in order to enable every Christian family to have one in their home. The pictures will hold good only till 1st April.

The Finance Committee, upon their return, recommended that a special grant of $75.00 each be made to Tamworth and Bath Continuation Schools, and on motion
the report was adopted.
Dr. H. S. Northmore, of Bath, explained to the Council that a grant of $75.00 would not be of any material benefit to the Village in the maintenance of a two-teacher Continuation School, as the direct tax upon the people would be about $822.00 over and above their already large assessment for school purposes. If the County Council would make their grant large enough, he felt perfectly satisfied that free access to the school would be given to all pupils within a reasonable distance.

Mr. Longmore explained that, while the Council were in sympathy with the position that Bath was placed in, the Finance Committee were unable to recommend a grant of any larger sum.
Moved by Messrs. Loyst and Glenn, that the report be referred back to the Finance Committee with instructions to make a grant of $150.00 to Bath, instead of $75.00 to Tamworth and $75.00 to Bath. Lost.
Mr. Harrison thought the report of the Committee should stand and both schools be treated alike, as Tamworth needed it as well as Bath.

On motion the Council adjourned until 1.30 p.m.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

Council resumed as per adjournment.
The Roads and Bridges Committee reported and recommended giving the free use of the road machinery when in Sheffield, on condition that Sheffield pay full expense of operation, men's time, etc., in building the road between Tamworth village and Tam-worth station; time of work not to exceed one week. They also recommended engaging Geo. C. Wright, of Kingston, as consulting engineer, to be paid at the rate of $10.00 per day and expenses, same as in 1912. They also recommended that the expense of moving County Road machinery be charged to General County Road account.

Moved by Messrs. Loyst and Kenny, that the report be adopted.
Mr. Loyst brought up the matter of an amendment to By-law 276 for the widening of tires. Mr. Loyst recommended that the following grading be made: Wagons of 2,000 lbs., 2-inch tires; 3,000 lbs., 3-inch tires; 4,000 lbs., 4-inch tires.

After considerable discussion the weight was increased to 2,500 lbs., 2-inch tires;
3,500 lbs., 3-inch tires; 4,500 lbs., 4-inch tires.

A By-law containing the above amendment was given its first reading.

Moved by Messrs. Loyst and Longmore, that no more County Roads be taken on until the present system is completed. Lost.
By-laws were passed for the extension of the County Road System in Camden and Sheffield.

Moved by Messrs. Longmore and Kenny,
that John T. Grange and E. O. Clark, Auditors, be paid $5.00 each for extra work on Auditors' Report. Carried.

Account of Boyle & Son, 255 jail, $12.35
Court House, were ordered to be paid.
Frank Hart, account for wood, $180.00, and J. D. Bell, $37.70, contingencies, were ordered to be paid.

A By-law for overdrawing $25,000.00
from the Dominion Bank, was given its first and second readings.

A representative of the Case Machinery Company, was heard in reference to buying of new machinery.

Moved by Messrs. Osborne and Harrison, that each Municipal Clerk furnish the County Clerk with a certified copy of the 1912 assessment roll.

Considerable time was taken up in the discussion of the advisability of selling one of the County crushers which are out of date and purchasing an up-to-date one, capable of doing the work.

The Roads and Bridges Committee were instructed to see to the matter.
Council adjourned until to-morrow at 9
a.m.

SATURDAY MORNING.

Council met pursuant to adjournment.
Members all present except Mr. Wartman.
The minutes of yesterday were read, and on motion were confirmed.

Communication, R. P. Fairbairn, Deputy Minister of Public Works, saying that the matter of the proposed change in the County Roads in Adolphustown would have to stand until Mr. McLean looked the situation over. Ordered filed.

The By-law to overdraw to the extent of $25,000.00, to meet the now current expenditure of the County was given its third

ORGANIZATION MEETING.

An important convention is to be held at the Temple Building, Toronto, on Easter Monday, March 24th, when the Liberal Club Federation of Ontario will be formally organized. A preliminary meeting was held about a month ago and it was unanimously decided to form a federation of Liberal Clubs in the Province.

The Federation will begin with a membership of twenty-five clubs and the number is sure to be increased rapidly. In addition to the cities which will be represented there are numerous clubs from towns, villages and the rural districts. It is hoped that this last class of club will increase greatly in number for it is desired that the movement should extend into all districts of the Province.

Neither the individual clubs nor the federation itself will have any connection with the organization of the Liberal party. The movement is entirely debating and educational in its scope and it is attracting a large number of young men who would not wish to be narrowly partisan. Liberal principles will be upheld, but the clubs will be free to differ on individual points from the policy of the Liberal parties at Ottawa and Toronto.

The provincial chairman of the Federation is Mr. J. R. Marshall, President of the Hamilton Liberal Club.

The meeting between the two was cordial, not to say affectionate. A friendly face in New York to Richard was like a water hole in the desert. To the earl he was as welcome as a "f" pun note when I'm strapped, by gad!" Lord Croyland suggested a spin in his motor, and Richard, who had nothing but leisure on his hands and was glad of any break in the dull monotony, accepted with alacrity. The motor was a four cylinder Layton, with a vicious back fire and a hoarse, wet cough, which would have warned an expert to look after his igniter and relieve the oil vent. The auto car was rented, and, besides, machinery was a detail to be looked after in the garage; therefore the driver hiccupped up Riverside drive with a charming disregard for signs and omens.

The Englishman talked, and the Texan listened, though he adroitly kept the conversation in a social vein on the chance of finding some opening for an attack on Irvington. In this he was not disappointed. The earl had secured letters of introduction to Jacob Renwyck, but on calling at the Broad street offices had found the gentleman absent. He left his letters, together with a note of regret, and had promptly received a cordial invitation to join a small house party in the home of the Renwycks on the Hudson. He had accepted and intended to go there on the following day, where his valet would join him, bringing his luggage from Washington.

Richard's heart rose and rejoiced. Here was a possible chance to meet Miss Renwyck, yet he must proceed with caution.

"Renwyck," he said thoughtfully. "Seems to me I've heard that name. Well off?"

The earl became so eloquent on that subject that his companion's suspicions were at once aroused, and more so as the Englishman's attention was riveted upon an income rather than his steering gear.

"Any daughters in the family?" asked the Texan carelessly.

"One. Aw—quite passable, I understand."

Richard agreed with him, but did not think it necessary to mention the fact.

"Did you ever meet the lady?"

"No, old chap."

"Nor any of the family?"

"Never. I am—ah—not so keen, however, on Miss Renwyck's—er—relatives, don't you know," drawled his lordship in his most blase and superior manner.

The Texan's white teeth closed with an angry snap. He could not bear his friend in that pose, but he put a curb on his tongue.

who was in the act of raising the Englishman's head.

The Texan was about to answer truthfully when the earl opened his eyes and drawled out languidly, but in a sufficiently clear voice: "My name is Richard Williams of San Antonio, Texas—Hotel St. Regis—I'll pay all damages. This gentleman has one of my cards in his pocket."

The earl then closed his eyes deliberately, as though the matter were entirely disposed of—really to shut out Richard's surprised and reproachful glance.

The real Richard Williams of San Antonio, Tex., was thunderstruck at this limitless display of nerve, but his vigorous protest was checked by an elaborate wink from the sufferer. Accordingly he handed the officer one of his own cards and stood forth ready and eager to answer all questions.

"What is your name?" asked the patrolman, notebook in hand.

"Er—Peter Wilson."

"Friend of this gentleman?"

"Chaufeur," interrupted Croyland quickly.

"Ah!" said the patrolman. "Were you driving?"

"No," answered Richard truthfully. "I gave the wheel to that idiot, and only through a special dispensation of Providence am I now able to answer your questions. Anything more?"

In a measure he had evened up with the earl, but not quite.

"How did your machine happen to run into this man's cart?" continued the officer.

"Don't know. Shied at something, I reckon," replied the involuntary chauffeur sarcastically.

This was not technical, but it amused the officer, whereupon, at Croyland's adroit suggestion, Richard presented him with a twenty dollar bill—his own, by the way—and asked him to have the machine towed to the nearest garage, hinting that if Mr. Williams were approached properly it might not be to the patrolman's disadvantage.

The officer made short work of the indignant farmer, ordering him to present his claim to the Layton Motor company, but, first of all, to stop talking. He suggested sending a carriage and a doctor from New Rochelle, but here the lady motorist, who had been an interested spectator, descended from her car and graciously offered to convey the two gentlemen back to New York.

This offer was gratefully accepted, Richard and the patrolman helping the Englishman into the tonneau. The farmer wished to accompany them, but was promptly suppressed by divers threats of the law for blocking public highways.

"Mr. Wilson," briefly remarked the trap, was forced to cool his heels in the waiting room while the seriously damaged Englishman was being patched up temporarily by the doctors and put to bed in a private room. After a long time the uniformed nurse entered briskly and accosted the impatient Texan.

"Are you the chauffeur?"

"The chauf—no—er—yes, of course,"

stammered Richard in wrathful confusion.

"Very well, then. Mr. Williams wants to see you at once. This way, please."

She spoke curtly, as if she had little use for chauffeurs in general and none at all for this particular specimen. Richard, however, rose obediently—he could do nothing else—but his cheeks were flaming hotly at his false and humiliating position. Croyland was carrying his joke a little too far.

"Thank you," he answered grimly, to the great surprise of the nurse. "I'm particularly anxious to see the gentleman myself."

He was led to the door of a bare but sunny room, spotlessly clean, where the woman left him. He entered and closed the door sharply behind him and then turned to face the bandaged earl reposing peacefully in bed.

"Look here, Croyland! What do you mean by giving my name in place of your own?"

The earl smiled up at him and winked craftily.

"Now, don't be a silly ass, old chap. Sit down. You can't smoke here, but I dare say you won't mind."

Richard seated himself somewhat irritably and awaited the answer to his question. For a moment the Englishman lay with closed eyes, then opened them and drawled out irrelevantly:

"Ripping girl, that Miss Sempton, eh? Don't let me forget her address—832 Madison avenue. I shall send flowers—er—"

"To thunder with your flowers!" snapped Richard, a red spot appearing on either cheek. "Why did you give my name?"

"Now, don't be in a hurry, Dickie; I'm coming to that," returned the Englishman, with maddening complacency. "You see, dear boy, it is this way: I'm here in New York on a most delicate affair in the interests of a foreign government, and I can't afford to be written up in the newspapers as having been knocked out in an accident. Really, you know, it might lead to international complications and all that sort of thing. By Jove, you can't imagine!"

"But"—began his friend, when the Englishman checked him with his unwounded hand.

"It is simply out of the question, old chap. I'd have a lot of fellows after me, and all that. Your newspaper chaps are such silly asses they'd get my business out of me and ruin everything. And, then, another thing—there'll be trouble about that motor and possibly a lawsuit by that idiot of a farmer. I couldn't have that, you know. It would be most annoying—beastly!"

"Oh, I see," said Richard, with infinite scorn in his tone; "it will be far easier for you to lie snug here and be petted and coddled by good looking nurses, while I'm saddled with tribulation and a live wire."

"Infinitely," agreed the Earl of Croyland, with beaming good nature. "You can see that yourself."

"No; he's a lazy beggar," the earl, languidly suppressed "and a thief, too, by Jove! time it was four pound st jeweled cigar cutter. Men him—he'll understand. You also that I have a letter from Mr. Drake of Scotland Yard."

For half an hour longer I remained with the earl discuss tails of the explanation to wyck and some other matter could attend to for Lord. Then he arose to take his leaving to run up to Irvington morning.

"Oh, I say, Wilson," the earl after him as he reached the nurse having just entered wing that Mr. Williams mu alone forthwith, "you w about that beastly machine, 'Certainly not," returned t Richard and immediately b livious to "beastly machines everything else on earth except ory of a warm, limp form th tied in his arms and a hea blown hair that cuddled a shoulder while he rode amid of cattle on that faroff Texa

"Pardon me, Mr. Renwyck began again, "my name"—

The Texan's white teeth closed with an angry snap. He could not bear his friend in that pose, but he put a curb on his tongue.

"Look here, Croyland," he asked as indifferently as he could, "do you mean to tell me that you are going to Irvington tomorrow with the avowed intention of making love to a lady you have never seen?"

"Call it prospecting," laughed the Englishman. "It's a fair game, isn't it?"

"No, it isn't," snapped the Texan, falling into the vernacular of the plains. "It's a dingy deal with a cold deck. Where does the girl come in?"

"Coronet," drawled the noble earl, "and not such a bad sort under it. If she is satisfied, I am, I'm sure."

"Birthright, mess of pottage and a pig in a poke," suggested Richard rather warmly. "But what of you? Why, great Scott, man, you've never seen her! She may be humpbacked—hideous!"

"My dear old chap," said the earl, with a dry, indulgent smile, "you will learn some day that a Bradstreet report covers a multitude of freckles. By Jove, I've even known it to condone a hump!"

Here the conversation stopped suddenly. The machine had done the same. They were far out on the Westchester road in the vicinity of New Rochelle, with nothing in sight but a farmer's truck wagon approaching from an opposite direction, with a big yellow dog trotting beside the wheel.

The earl drawled something about it being "most extraw'dinary" and began to manipulate the various levers, but without results. Clearly he was unfamiliar with the vagaries of this particular brand of motor. He descended from the car and turned his engine over, being rewarded by a clattering roar which caused him to leap back into his seat again. He released his brake and inadvertently threw his weight upon the speed controller. The machine arose and rejoiced as a strong man going to battle.

As Mr. Richard Williams afterward described it, "the thing first bucked and then bolted for nowhere in particular. It attended to the yellow dog first, then ate up the farmer's wagon, turned over on its back and kicked up its heels, hollering like a calf under the branding iron."

The graphic historian found himself sailing gracefully over a barbed wire fence until he alighted in a soft field, where he plowed up considerable earth, but sustained no serious injury. The Earl of Croyland had fared worse. In his headlong plunge he had struck a fence post, wrenching one leg badly and fracturing his right collar bone. The irate farmer arose from the dust with a bleeding nose and immediately put in a claim for damages, not only for his wagon and his valuable dog, but for loss of time and the greater portion of his costume. Nothing seemed to have happened to his vocabulary, it was noticed.

Richard crawled under the barbed wire fence back to the road and turned his attention to his injured friend. In the meantime a correctly attired young woman driving a Panhard stopped to view the general wreck, while a road patrolman galloped up and took bustling charge of every one.

"What's the gentleman's name and address?" he demanded of Richard, farmer wished to accompany them, but was promptly suppressed by divers threats of the law for blocking public highways.

"Mr. Wilson," briskly remarked the young lady, who had given her name as Miss Sempton, "I think your employer would be more comfortable if you propped his injured limb on the seat. You would better ride with me."

Richard flushed, but obeyed. To be thought a chauffeur by the patrolman was one thing, but the occupation was not so attractive in the eyes of a dashing young aristocrat in a leather cloak and cap.

"What address, Mr. Williams?" she asked.

"The nearest hospital, if you please," answered the earl, wincing as the machine started.

To Richard the ride was not very pleasant. Miss Sempton talked to him politely, it is true, but much in the same manner as she might have consulted her groom with regard to the condition of her horses. With the earl she was on different terms, being charmingly solicitous for his comfort and expressing deep regret at his misfortune.

"How are you getting on, Mr. Williams?" she asked, turning her head with a sympathetic smile.

"Jolly," said the earl, though beads of perspiration were glistening on his brow. He nursed his drooping shoulder and drew what comfort he could from his glimpses of a wind flushed cheek and a pair of sparkling eyes that were turned upon him ever and anon.

They stopped at the entrance of St. Luke's hospital, on Cathedral heights, where the bogus Williams, with profuse thanks to his good Samaritan, was borne away by two attendants.

The real Richard Williams raised his hat and thanked her also. He was about to follow his friend when Miss Sempton detained him.

"One moment, Mr. Wilson. That Layton motor you are driving—is it a pretty fair machine?"

"Delightful," said Richard, who for the first time in his life had received his baptism of fire and gasoline. "Cheerful as a child, gentle as a woman and guaranteed for speed and"—

"Is it a water cooler?"

"Water cooler?" exclaimed the young man in undisguised astonishment. "Well, no; I never heard it called that, or a temper cooler either. No ice about that machine."

Miss Sempton regarded him critically through her drooping eyelashes.

"Where is the ignition coil located?"

"Why—why—under the tank," said Richard as a wild guess. The young woman thung back her head and laughed.

"Did you learn to drive a motor in a hansom cab, sir?"

"On a broncho, ma'am," returned Richard, cheerfully seeing the game was up.

"There," she said as she held out her hand to him, "I knew you were not a chauffeur! One thing more. Your friend Mr. Williams is an Englishman, isn't he?"

"No," answered the young man solemnly; "he's a Turk."

"Infinitely," agreed the Earl of Croyland, with beaming good nature. "You can see that yourself."

"No, I can't," said Richard, "and, what's more, I won't!"

"You are a private citizen and can do what you please, you know. I'm a public person and can't."

"I won't do it, I say!" persisted the other stubbornly.

"Oh, yes, you will, old chap," the Englishman asserted with infectious assurance. "I'd do the same for you, and it won't be long either. By the way, I won't be able to go to the Renwycks at Irvington tomorrow."

Richard brightened visibly. The proposition afforded some points of advantage after all.

"You see," the earl went on, "I'll be laid up here for perhaps two weeks, Ask him if he'll be good enough to hold my luggage until I can get out of this place and send for it. My man will arrive there with my boxes tomorrow from Washington. Now, won't you do this for me, old fellow?"

"Well, yes, I suppose so, so long as I am in for it," said Richard, striving to conceal his joy. "Anything else?"

The earl nodded. "I'd be glad if you would dismiss my man as soon as he arrives. Bills is his name, Woolsey Bills."

"Yes, I remember him now. Lord, what a name!" said Richard, who had seen the man at San Antonio with Croyland for a day or so before his lordship started for the ranch, sending his man back to New York.

"Yes, isn't it? So suggestive, you know, to have him always around—especially on the first of the month, you know."

Suddenly into his brain there flashed a brilliant idea—nothing less than an inspiration. To avoid trouble the Earl of Croyland had coolly appropriated the name of Richard Williams. A fair exchange was no robbery by the laws of love and war, and if Richard borrowed the Englishman's title for the time being an imminent calamity might be averted. At all events, he would meet the girl he loved, which was the chief object in view, and, besides, the proposition appealed to his sense of humor. His spirits rose at once.

"Er—pardon me, Mr. Renwyck," he observed, with a faint suggestion of what he thought was the Englishman's drawing manner, "what jolly fine grounds you have! What d'ye call 'em?"

"Restmore."
"Ha, ha! Very good. Really, you know, quite up to Croyland Park."
"Think so?" said his flattered host. "I'm glad you like the place. Here we are!"

He drew the mare up sharply beneath the porte cochere and tossed the reins to a waiting groom. In a moment the pseudo noble guest was standing on a wide portico whose pillars and trellises were twined with wistaria in the season's first luxuriant bloom. From a seat on the lawn a vision in a bewildering white morning gown arose and came toward him. The Texan was conscious of an electric current turned slowly to the crowning notch of ecstasy. He saw for the second time in his life an oval face framed in dark hair, a pair of melting eyes and a nose with just that saucy tilt which seemed to dare him to plant a kiss beneath it, and a figure that he had once held in his arms. How could he have ever let it go?

"Lord Croyland," said Mr. Renwyck, indifferently enough, as if adorable girls like that were as plenty as black-berries, "allow me to present you to my daughter."

The adorable girl smiled and extended a hand, which Richard took, striving to prevent his own from trembling.

"Miss Renwyck," he murmured, looking squarely into her eyes, "you convince me that America is the very finest country in the world."

CHAPTER V.

TO dive is one thing, to swim about is another, and to get safely out is still a third. Having taken the plunge, Richard Williams was now at leisure to contemplate the deeps in which he found himself. Here he was in a strange house under a borrowed name and title, with little knowledge or experience to enable him to carry off the imposition successfully. True, from his associations with the earl in Texas he could recall some of the Englishman's oddities of speech and manner, to which his own soft southern accent readily accommodated itself, but this was a flimsy scaffolding by which to build a successful fraud. Though well educated, Richard's environment had afforded him small opportunity to become familiar with the manners of polite society, and his knowledge of England and English customs, like that of many better informed Americans, was meager. On the other hand, he had plenty of common sense, much of his father's native shrewdness, a fund of ready wit, a cool courage in an emergency and in general nerve enough to

How much does your master pay you?"
"Twelve pounds a month, sir, an' my keep."

"Very well," nodded Richard. "I can do the same for you, with the promise of a fat bonus for good behavior. Now, listen. I'm going to trust you and speak candidly. Lord Croyland's got to lie low—Jap—er—you know."

"Ow long?"

"For a week or perhaps longer. I am to be Earl of Croyland. You are to attend me as my man, address me as Lord Croyland and render me such assistance as I require. Is that satisfactory?"

The valet's lips twitched, but he answered, in a level tone:

"Beg pardon, Mr. Williams, but it can't be done."

"Why not?" demanded Richard.

"Cawn't reconcile it with my conscience, sir."

"How much is this delicate organ of yours worth, Bills?"

"Twenty-five pounds a month, sir, an'—the bonus as you were good enough to mention, sir."

The valet had the whip hand of him, and no one knew it better than the arch conspirator; therefore he hastened to clinch the bargain before the terms thereof should rise.

"All right," he agreed, "I'll do it—on conditions. I engage you for one month, that's $125, and a like sum, if you serve me faithfully, at the end of it."

"An'—the other Lord Croyland, sir?"

"I'll square you with him all right. You know who I am"—he paused and fixed his keen gray eye upon the man, adding, as his square chin grew more dominant—"but no monkey shines! I have a sort of bonus for that too. Just please remember that I can hit a half dollar at seventy-five yards—size 44—and I won't be trifled with. I, too, have a sensitive conscience, Bills, but it has its limitations. Now, then, what do you say?"

"Very good, m' lord," said Bills, with another deferential bow.

Richard chuckled and rubbed his hands. Matters were beginning to assume a more cheerful aspect. He paced up and down for a moment or two longer, then turned to the waiting servant.

"Now, Cardinal Woolsey, we'll get right down to business. I want you to go to the city this morning and bring me a condensed history of England and a map of your jolly little island. Then I'll need some rather strenuous coaching. Did you bring the—er—I mean—my trunks?"

"Your lordship's boxes, m' lord?"

"Oh, yes, boxes, of course. Thank you. Did you bring them?"

"They are in the 'all below, m' lord. I'll 'ave 'em up immejitly, sir."

Bills turned to go, but Richard checked him.

"Wait. I haven't finished yet. On your way to town and back I want you to take a memorandum of the names of Lord—of my friends in London and here in America. I want to know about my family, where I have been and whom I have met. You understand? General information. Now get those boxes and let's have a look at my togs."

"I understand, sir."

"It's lucky," soliloquized Richard after the departure of the valet, "that Bills is such an infernal rascal or I'd have trouble with him. Yet I suppose we might be called 'birds of a feather' with a choice between a butter knife and an oyster sticker to eat ice cream with. It was depressing."

Bills curbed his smile and supplied the needed information, then made himself ready to take the 12 o'clock train to New York.

"Is there anything else, m' lord?" he asked.

"Yes," said Richard, who was perspiring before a mirror; "I'd be uncommonly grateful if you'd show me how to keep this blasted single barreled eyeglass in without bursting a blood vessel."

CHAPTER VI.

AT luncheon Richard was presented to Mrs. Renwyck, nee Corrigan, a kindly disposed middle aged woman of ample proportions, whose money had enabled her to marry above her and who had since been desperately endeavoring to live up to the obligations of her position. To her a lord was a lord, indeed, and at first she was rather inclined to stand in awe of the Earl of Croyland's title, but before luncheon was over she had lost her nervousness and was beginning to feel toward him as though he were a real American. Miss Harriet Renwyck was charming, sitting opposite Richard, who, having crossed his first bridge with flying colors, grew more confident, though careful not to overact his role. Thanks to the instruction of the exemplary Bills, he was steering a safe course among the forks too. The Texan discussed America with his host, who admitted candidly that Richard's views were broader than those of any Englishman he had ever known. Concerning the present policy of Great Britain Mr. Renwyck found his guest strangely reticent. The conversation then turned upon various topics, social and personal, ending in horseflesh, which with Mr. Renwyck was a passion.

"Lord Croyland," he said, "I'm really worried as to what to do with a horse of mine called Hawk. He is demoralizing my whole stable."

"And what is the trouble with Hawk?" Richard asked.

"Everything," exclaimed his host. "A magnificent animal, but a very devil. I beg your pardon, Mrs. Renwyck, but it's true. Why, sir, there isn't a man on my place who dares to put his leg across his back."

"Ever try an outsider?" asked the guest, forgetting his part in his interest in the horse.

"Yes," returned Mr. Renwyck. "There was a jockey up here last week. I offered him $20 for every minute he kept the saddle. By a stop watch he earned about 10 cents and told me that he wouldn't have the beast for a precious gift."

"Too bad," murmured Richard. "Really, I should like uncommonly well to try him."

"You!" cried Mr. Renwyck in genuine surprise. He paused to laugh. "I know you Englishmen are pretty good horsemen, Lord Croyland, but I'll tell you what—if you ride Hawk for half an hour without a spill I'll make you a present of him."

"Done!" said Richard.

"On conditions," added the other craftily.

"And those?"

"If you fail you'll buy him at my own price."

"Done again!" said Richard quietly.

meager. On the other hand, he had plenty of common sense, much of his father's native shrewdness, a fund of ready wit, a cool courage in an emergency and in general nerve enough to brazen out the affair until such a time as he might see fit to make a clean breast of it and trust the rest to luck.

Having made his preparations for luncheon, he was pacing up and down the rooms which had been assigned to him, thoughtfully turning the matter over in his mind, when a servant announced the arrival of Croyland's man Bills.

"Ah!" said Richard, very eager to encounter what might prove to be the first check and get it over with. "Show him up, please."

The servant departed, and to the adventurer came another inspiration. Here was an opportunity which, if handled delicately, might lead to brilliant results. The valet entered—a slight man of medium height, with a clean shaven face, a puttylike complexion and a pale, unemotional eye.

"M' lord!" The man stopped suddenly, passed his hand over his mouth and stood staring at Richard, while a look of recognition slowly illumined his brain.

"Why, Mr. Williams, sir!" he burst out presently. "I thought!"

"Ah," smiled Richard, in his most innocent and beguiling manner, "so you haven't forgotten your little trip to Texas?"

"No—no, sir. An' those awful cow gentlemen, sir!" faltered Bills, with a shudder of remembrance of some practical jokes of which he had been the victim at the hands of some of the cow punchers before he left for New York and civilization.

"Good! Now, attend me carefully. Do you know anything of the reasons why your master is in New York?"

"A little, sir, but not much—some business for the Japs, for a foreign government, sir."

Richard took a thoughtful turn up and down the room, then faced the man again.

"You look rather an intelligent man, Bills, and can appreciate what I am going to say to you. Your master finds it necessary to lie low for a week or two. Understand?"

"Very good, sir." "In the first place, Lord Croyland authorized me to discharge you immediately upon your arrival."

The servant looked up quickly, a gleam of suspicion in his fishy eye.

"Askin' your pardon, sir," he said deferentially, "but 'ow am I to know, sir, that you—that?"

"That I am acting on the level?" finished Richard. "I admire your caution. To begin with, you'll have to take my word. If this, however, has no weight, I am to freshen your memory with a little matter of four pound six and a jeweled cigar cutter. Follow me?"

The valet licked his lips and said nothing. Richard went on:

"If you still have doubts on the subject, Lord Croyland is in possession of an inquiry from a friend of yours in Scotland Yard—an inquisitive duck of the name of Drake. I dare say he's asking after your health. Well?"

"W'en would you have me leave, sir?" asked Bills most deferentially again, without a change of countenance.

Richard regarded the man critically. "That's just the point, Friend Woolsey. I think I can arrange to give you a position—that is, for a time at least.

"It's lucky," stammered Richard after the departure of the valet, "that Bills is such an infernal rascal or I'd have trouble with him. Yet I suppose we might be called 'birds of a feather' in this." He frowned. "Oh, well, it's the only way to win her, and if I can make her love me she'll forgive me anything."

The luggage was presently brought up and inspected critically, Richard finding with joy that the earl's clothes fitted him to perfection, and while Bills was placing them in the various drawers and closets the new Lord Croyland sought for pointers thirstily.

"By the way," he exclaimed suddenly, "there is something important which I almost forgot. I've got to run the gantlet of that table at luncheon in about half an hour, and I want you to brush me up in the matter of cutlery. Do you understand the game?"

"Yes, sir; movin' in the best circles as a gentleman's gentleman, I know all about it, sir."

"You might throw in a few lords, you know, Bills, just to keep in practice, so you won't forget."

"Yes, m' lord."

"Well, as I was saying," went on Richard, "I went to a swell dinner at Houston once and haven't stopped blushing about it yet. I squandered seven different kinds of forks before the dessert came and found myself craftily.

"And those?"

"If you fail you'll buy him at my own price."

"Done again!" said Richard quietly.

But here Mrs. Renwyck and her daughter protested vigorously. They would not have their guest murdered before their eyes for a foolish wager. There were other horses in the stable of which Lord Croyland might have his pick, so why jeopard life and limb on this crazy, cranky brute that had proved himself so dangerous? After much discussion the matter was compromised. They would inspect the horse after luncheon and then decide. Mrs. Renwyck believed that her guest after once seeing the animal would change his mind.

To Richard, who had been born in the saddle, so to speak, without reflecting on his mother, the prospect of conquering Hawk was as wine on a thirsty toper's tongue. Since leaving Texas his very knees had pined to grip a horse's barrel, and now it was with the greatest difficulty that his rising spirits were held in check.

DAIRY WISDOM.

Give cows six to eight weeks' rest between lactation periods.

Discard the cow which has failed at the end of the year to pay market price for all the feed she has consumed.

All cows that are hearty eaters are not profitable producers, but all profitable producers are usually hearty eaters.

The best of cows will not produce milk unless fed liberally on the right kind of feed.

If the udder of the fresh cow is in good condition and shows no trace of garget the calf should be removed after it has nursed once or twice.

Cows giving over a gallon of milk a day should be fed grain. A good grain mixture is corn chop mixed with bran or cottonseed meal. A pound of this mixture should be given each day for every three pounds of milk produced.

LAXATIVES FOR HORSES.

Care Must Be Exercised In Feeding Bran—Carrots Beneficial.

While the horse is working hard succulent food is a positive injury in that it tends to remove undigested, as a result of laxity of the bowels, food nutrients that are daily required for formation of muscle supply or vim and vigor—in other words, repair of tissue waste, writes Dr. A. S. Alender in the Rural New Yorker. Where, on the other hand, the horse is idle the succulent food may be and usually is required to overcome the tendency to constipation and its accompanying train of evils.

In the former case the feeding of much bran daily might be detrimental, and in the latter case it would be useful and profitable. The hardworking horse keeps its bowels in condition by exercise and utilizes all of the food nutrients supplied him so long as his digestive organs are kept in good condition. If he be fed a bran mash daily he may continually suffer from what may be called subacute indigestion and fail to derive the proper amount of nourishment from the sound oats given him in addition to the bran. When Sunday arrives, however, his wonted exercise is stopped and he is unable to throw off the surplus food nutrients not needed by work. If he has been daily fed dry bran he will now be liable to suffer from acute indigestion if given a bran mash.

This being the case, the feeding of a bran mash to a horse that has been taking dry bran throughout the week is a dangerous practice. Where the hard one to suppose that it was even more nutritious than oats. It is indigestible and passes through the intestines in many cases wholly undigested. It acts as a laxative for the reason that it is a foreign body and is thrown off as useless by the irritated intestines. Carrots act in a somewhat different manner. They do not prove laxative on account of any irritating effect, but on account of real succulence, and have the special power of acting nicely upon the pores of the skin. They may be fed to a horse in poor condition when bran would only aggravate the impoverishment. Roots are relished by horses and are digestible.

Dairy Filth a Crime.

A dirty, filthy cow stable is inexcusable. It is a bad habit that must be abolished. Every farmer should take pride enough in his business and in his own self respect to abandon the habit of housing the cows in a dirty stable. His regard for his family and the good name of his children should induce him to reform in this line. But the real menace is the danger of the product from such a stable. It is a crime for any man to defile a food product, whatever the law may say.—Farm Press.

Looked Bad.

The monotony of life at a rural railway station was relieved the other day by an amusing incident. A dandy took his ticket at the booking office and then surveyed the station buildings leisurely. On hearing the noise of the coming train he made more haste than speed to the platform. A little run when nearly at the top of the stairway caused his foot to slip. His silk hat wobbled on his brow, his umbrella and bag betook themselves one to his right and one to his left, but he manfully regained his belongings in a grasp all sort of fashion when on all fours. Then he looked wearily up at the gate official.

"Is this the way to the train?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," was the response. "You can come that way if you prefer to do

FINALLY CHANGES HER MIND.

The Unexpected Advent of Ten Small and Downy Additions to the Deacon's Family Necessitates Postponing That Interesting Event.

By M. QUAD.

AS Deacon Dolby worked with saw and hammer at the barn, he heard Mrs. Dolby in the house singing "Rock of Ages."

He smiled and he sighed.

After singing the hymn seven times over Mrs. Dolby dropped it for "I Shall Watch For Thee."

"She's getting ready!" whispered the deacon.

After "watching" for a quarter of an hour, Mrs. Dolby took up the strains of "I've Got a Home Over There."

"It'll be her night for it!" whispered the deacon as he shook his head.

And by and by there came floating on the air the words of the good old hymn, "With the Angels Up Above."

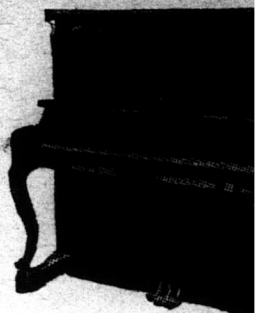

"— it!" announced the good man at the barn as he threw down some hay to his hungry cow.

After supper that evening Deacon Dolby casually observed that he must go down to the store and get a pound of tennypenny nails to fix the hopen with on the morrow, and he left Mrs. Dolby singing as she cleared the dishes off the table. He was gone an hour, and when he returned he was astonished to find the house in darkness. He entered and lighted a lamp, and as he passed through into the sitting room he beheld the woman lying on her back on the floor with her eyes closed and her hands folded on her breast. He gave her one glance and then sat down at the center table to read. At the postoffice he had received a circular relating to geese and their care, and it

"And ye call that quick work," answered the Irishman. "Why, th' same thing happened to me in Ireland wance. on the noon with her eyes closed and her hands folded on her breast. He gave her one glance and then sat down at the center table to read. At the postoffice he had received a circular relating to geese and their care, and it started off in an interesting way.

Mrs. Dolby Revives.

Deacon Dolby had been reading for five minutes and had got as far as to be told that a goose was capable of affection when there was a stir on the floor and Mrs. Dolby sat up. She coughed three coughs to hint to Mr. Dolby that she was not dead, but the circular held all his interest. Two minutes passed, and then Mrs. Dolby rose up and took a seat on the lounge and said:

"Samuel, I didn't want to frighten you, but I couldn't help fainting away."

The deacon read from the circular that a goose had been known to go into a rage at the mere sight of a red headed woman, and just then Mrs. Dolby said:

"You had just gone out when Mrs. Lamphere came in. She hadn't been over for a week, and she wanted to borrow a darning needle and ask me if I was going to put up any pickled peaches this season. We had talked for about five minutes when all at once she broke down and sobbed like a child. Samuel, do you want to know what she sobbed about?"

He didn't. He wanted to stick right to that circular until he had devoured every line of it. He was finding out that he had lived for forty-five years without knowing the goose as she was.

The Cat Is Out.

"I at first thought that mebbe her sister in North Dakota was dead, but when she got over her sobbing so's she could speak she said it was because she felt such pity for me. Then—then, Samuel, I broke down and sobbed with her and—"

And she sobbed and snuffled and sobbed again, and the deacon sat there and read that if a farmer could have patience with a goose he could teach her to jump through a hoop the same as a circus performer.

"But I'm not going to cry any more, Samuel. The time for crying has passed. I am going to tell you what Mrs. Lamphere said and then end this life of turmoil and trouble. I have known Mrs. Lamphere ever since she was a little girl, and I have never known her to tell a lie, and she is not a tattler either. What she told me was from a sense of duty. She said it made her heart ache to know that I was living with a pirate and never suspecting it."

The deacon prepared himself for the worst, but gave no outward sign, and presently Mrs. Dolby ceased sniffing and continued:

The Old Time Quilting Bee Has Returned to Favor.

NEW KIND OF THIMBLE PARTY.

Clever Way in Which This Affair May Be Carried Out With Small Expenditure of Time or Trouble—Deciding For Oneself.

Dear Elsa—If you want an idea for an afternoon entertainment why don't you be up to date and give a modern version of the old time quilting party? This is the latest way to entertain one's married women friends this winter and at the same time make a quilt for baby, either for your own infant or as a gift for one of your friends.

This function is like and still unlike the old fashioned party of the same name. You make a quilt, to be sure, but it's only a small affair for baby's crib, or it may be merely a creeping quilt to lay upon the floor when his highness is learning to "navigate."

When sending out the invitations to the party be sure to tell each guest to bring her thimble and scissors. Then when they arrive give each one a lead pencil, a piece of unbleached muslin six inches square, a needle and a small spool of black embroidery cotton.

On each of the muslin squares is written the name of some wild or domestic animal, and it is the guest's duty to sketch the animal named on the muslin and outline it with the black cotton.

When all the squares are finished and put together by hand this patchwork is used for the top covering for a cotton quilt.

You have no idea the sport created by the funny attempts at drawing the figures, and many really good looking squares are turned out when fancy sketches are used to outline the animals. At my quilting party I gave prizes for the three best squares.

Another clever idea to be used at these afternoon thimble affairs is a "Mother Goose" suggestion. The guests are asked to cut out of the squares of muslin any figure that can be found in this well loved old nonsense book.

This selection leads to a wide variety of figures, all interesting and all pictures that will be a delight to a child, no matter how crudely they are made.

The "Goose" figures are of white muslin, mounted on squares of red or dark blue. They should be sewed on with buttonhole stitch with either white or colored thread, and if any outlining is necessary this can be done with plain or stem stitch in black.

As for refreshments, any kind of afternoon tea dainties are the thing, but do not attempt anything elaborate by way of "eats."

I had to stop my chatter with you just now to answer the telephone. Helen D. called up to ask me to decide a perfectly unimportant question for her.

Have you ever been harassed beyond endurance by some one afflicted with a chronic inability to make up her water until the apples may be pierced with a fork but are not in danger of breaking. Remove to the serving dish and fill each apple with a mixture of chopped raisins, dates and figs. Pour a little of the sirup over them and garnish with whipped cream. If desired uncooked apples may be used, in which case the skin should be left on. Red apples are the most attractive.

COLONIAL RUGS.

The Hand Woven Sort Are Again in Favor.

The hand woven rug or the colonial squares have come back to favor in the general return to the colonial styles of interior decoration that have swept over our homes.

There are many forms of hand woven rugs, the braided form being the easiest. A single braid of three strands is made of strips of cotton materials of many colors, sewed in long strands and collected in large balls before the braiding is begun.

The plaited rug can be in a round form or a long oval rug. Some women are emphasizing one color, and therefore the long strips are dyed by any of the directions that come with reliable dyes on the market.

A hooked rug may be made of pieces of linen, silk, gingham, etc., and a piece of burlap or bagging.

The small pieces are pulled up through the weave of the burlap by means of a rug hook. The strands are drawn tightly on the under surface, and when finished the wrong side resembles a series of plain stitches. On the upper side there are loops one inch deep. The whole material is filled in with loops in single patterns. Squares, circles, borders, etc., are marked off and then filled in. When finished these loops should be cut about a quarter of an inch off the top. The result will be a soft, solid pile.

To Destroy Pests.

There is a simple remedy for destroying insects that are sometimes found on household pets—dogs, cats, birds, etc.—which is not generally known, but which is said to be absolutely sure in its results. It is simply to wash the animal with the water in which potatoes have been boiled. When preparing the vegetables for dinner put plenty of water in the vessel in which they are boiled; then, when the potatoes are thoroughly cooked, pour this water off into a bucket or pan. When it is almost cold apply it to the skin of the animal with a sponge or cloth, taking care that it soaks well into the skin if the animal has long hair or thick fur; then with a soft scrubbing brush (a nailbrush will do) scrub the skin, separating the hair as you work.

Do not rinse this off with clear water. Let it dry thoroughly first; then wash the animal with clear water and a good strong soap. The first application is generally effectual, but if the case is a stubborn one it had better be repeated a few times in order to destroy the eggs.

This is also a cure for the parasite in which mange originates and is said to destroy plant lice also.

Prominent People Proud To Testify For "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. TIMOTHY McGRATH

130 ATLANTIC AVE., MONTREAL, MARCH 1st, 1912.

"For years, I suffered from Rheumatism, being unable to work for weeks at a time and spent hundreds of dollars on doctor's medicines, besides receiving treatment at Notre Dame Hospital where I was informed that I was incurable. I was discouraged when a friend advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". After using three packages, I felt relieved and continued until I had used five packages when a complete cure was the result after years of doctoring failed. I consider "Fruit-a-tives" a wonderful remedy. You are at liberty to use this testimonial to prove to others the good that "Fruit-a-tives" has done me."

COMFORT IN TEA GOWN.

Easy Matter to Convert Party Frock Into This Costume.

The word "negligee" covers a multitude of frilly, intimate costumes. There is, first, the tea gown, so named because it was the comfortable, informal costume the Englishwoman slipped into on her return from a day's sport when she joined the men again for tea. The English type of tea gown, however, has been glorified by many French touches until today it is a thing of great beauty. Many women wear these tea gowns to informal dinners in their own homes and often at that jolly function the Sunday night supper. It is very difficult, even for the initiated, to describe the difference between the tea gown and the dinner frock, a difficulty often increased by the fact that the tea gown has been evolved from a dinner dress which had

Helen D. called up to ask me to decide a perfectly unimportant question for her.

Have you ever been harassed beyond endurance by some one afflicted with a chronic inability to make up her mind? Helen D. drives every friend she possesses to desperation by persistent inquiries—"If you were in my place would you do this or that?"
When you give your candid opinion
I should do such or such a thing if the problem confronted me she comes back with the reply, "Yes, dear, that's all very well for you to say, but"—

I really think it is better to make your own decisions even should you occasionally decide unwisely. And as a reward of merit you may take heart by knowing that the oftener you face your own crises squarely the easier
you find it to rely upon your own judgment. You will at least get over the silly and weak minded habit of asking another, "Now, just what would you do in my case?" and you will end by preferring your own opinion to any haphazard advice of another.

Friends may through sympathy and experience be able to suggest and advise, but no friend, however great his sympathy, can transform himself into another's personality. The final settlement in the nature of things must lie with oneself.

Before my wisdom descends into something frivolous let me wish you all kinds of luck for the new year.
From MABEL.

WHAT TO EAT.

Unusual Ways of Serving Celery and Winter Apples.

Among the appetizing relishes so much used is stuffed celery. As a change from celery stuffed with cheese,
try the following: Select four tender stalks of celery of the same length and cut in halves; stuff with a mixture of equal parts of chopped raisins, dates and figs. Arrange them in star shapes on a round plate and garnish with celery tips.

A dainty luncheon or supper dessert,
says Good Housekeeping, is apple cup.
Here is the recipe:

Select medium sized firm apples;

core at the blossom end. Cook in a syrup made with equal parts sugar and to destroy plant lice also.

Cream of Mushroom Soup.

Peel and cut one pound of fresh mushrooms, put them in a porcelain lined kettle, cover with a quart of light stock (chicken or veal) and cook until tender. Press through a sieve and, returning to the kettle, add three or four tablespoonfuls of sago and cook twenty minutes longer, when you may season it and add one quart of scalded milk. Take one cupful of the soup and mix with the beaten yolks of four eggs and slowly pour the mixture back into the soup. Serve at once.

Right Way to Stew Prunes.

Wash the prunes and soak them overnight in cold water. In the morning cook them slowly in the water in which they were soaked, adding sugar
to taste and five or six slices of lemon.

The Psychological Moment.

Growler (to distressed harrier)—Keb,

A Woman of Her Word.

A woman was in a law court when she was asked her age and answered,
"Thirty-five."

"But," objected the judge, "you were before me two years ago, and you said
then you were thirty-five."

"Your honor," she loftily replied, "I am not one who would say one thing at one time and another thing at another time."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Jealous.

"A bandit held up a train, and the Pullman porter, single handed, overpowered and killed the robber," said
the old fogey. "That porter was a real hero."

"Hero nothing," remarked the grouch. "He didn't propose to stand for competition, that's all."—New York Sun.

She Didn't Knock.

He (at masquerade ball)—That's a singular looking costume you're wearing. What do you represent?

She—Opportunity.
He—Indeed! Then let me embrace
you.—Boston Transcript.

Teacher—Johnny, have you an excuse from your parent for being late at school?

Johnny—No, ma'am. I didn't have time to write it.—Baltimore Sun.

TEA GOWN OF THE SIMPLE VARIETY.

begun to show the signs of wear and tear. It is the simplest matter imaginable to take the foundation of the dinner frock and drape over it an overdress of chiffon or lace, as the fancy may dictate. The tea gown in the sketch shows the possibilities of this idea.

The first requisite of any negligee,
whether the more formal tea gown or
the simplest boudoir robe, is comfort.
It must be a garment so loose and roomy that it can be worn without corsets, and for this reason the high waist line is generally more becoming than the normal one. The fullness of the gown hanging from this raised waist line hides the fact that the support of the corset has been withdrawn. The simple little tea gown pictured is of pale blue albatross, with deep cuffs and shawl collar of white albatross dotted with blue. Lingerie beading run with blue ribbon holds the high empire waist in place.

Probably the most desolate spot in the world inhabited by white men is the lighthouse maintained by the Argentine Government at Cape Horn.
This is claimed to be the southernmost lighthouse in the world.

The Difference.

"Pa, what's the difference between the meaning of prepared and ready?"

"Well, there's many a person who may be prepared to die, but I never saw one who was ready."

On Monday morning about 2.30 a.m. a number of citizens were aroused by a rattling of their hot water tanks in connection with their bath room, and on investigation found they had no water. Late Sunday evening the superintendent of the Waterworks Co. Mr. J. R. Dafeo looked at the gage in his house and the pressure showed the usual amount of water in the tank and the pumps running as usual. About 2 a.m. he was aroused by a telephone from the G. T. Ry station that there were three engines at the station waiting for water and none to be had. On going to the power house Mr. Dafeo found the canal completely dry and the pumps stopped. The head gates on the canal were partly closed and frazil ice had completely stopped the openings left. After considerable trouble Mr. Dafeo opened the gates and got the pumps running again and soon had plenty of water. Several engines must have taken water at the station after the pumps stopped and emptied the tank. Two of the engines waiting for water had to draw their fires. As one of the large engine takes 80,000 gallons of water, a couple of full loads will empty the tank.

SPRING 1913

We are pleased to announce that we have been appointed sole representatives in Napanee for the House of Hobberlin, tailors to the Canadian gentleman. This firm we have been informed employs a most skillful and artistic designer to whom they pay the modest sum of $8000 per annum. Their sample outfit is the most elaborate we have ever seen from any house doing a special order business. We KNOW their Cloths are of a high order and the range embraces every line that a good dresser could desire. They absolutely guarantee every garment they turn out to be perfect in fit and workmanship. Money back if not satisfactory, and no grumbling. What more could any man ask. We would be delighted to show their range of samples to any man contemplating the purchase of a new suit. If you order and the garments are not entirely satisfactory to YOU it will cost you nothing whatever but the time you spent in making your selection. We know of no fairer way of doing business.

Samples are now ready for inspection at
